

(un)Countable Nouns and Quantifiers – Worksheet 1 – ANSWERS

✓ Answer Key – Countable & Uncountable Nouns + Quantifiers

Exercise 1: Fill in the Gaps

1. There isn't much time left before the train leaves.
→ "Much" is used with uncountable nouns in negative sentences.
  2. She has a few close friends in the city.
→ "A few" is used with countable nouns to indicate a small number (but still some).
  3. I'd love some coffee, please.
→ "Some" is used in positive sentences with both countable and uncountable nouns.
  4. We don't have any sugar in the cupboard.
→ "Any" is used in negative sentences with both countable and uncountable nouns.
  5. I bought a few apples at the market this morning.
→ "A few" is for countable nouns to mean "a small number."
  6. There were few people at the meeting—only three showed up!
→ "Few" (without "a") suggests a small number, possibly less than expected.
  7. I have a little experience in marketing, so I applied for the job.
→ "A little" is for uncountable nouns to indicate a small amount (but still some).
  8. We don't have enough chairs for everyone to sit.
→ "Enough" is used with both countable and uncountable nouns to indicate sufficiency.
  9. They gave us a lot of information about the course.
→ "A lot of" is used with both countable and uncountable nouns in affirmative sentences.
  10. There is no milk left, so we need to buy more.
→ "No" is used in positive sentences to indicate zero quantity.
-

Exercise 2: Multiple Choice - ANSWERS

1. I didn't have much time to finish the project.
→ "Much" is used with uncountable nouns in negative sentences.
2. We bought a few oranges at the market.
→ "A few" is for countable nouns to mean "a small number."
3. She had a little trouble finding the address.
→ "A little" is for uncountable nouns to indicate a small amount.
4. There aren't many books in the library today.
→ "Many" is for countable nouns in negative sentences and questions.
5. Would you like some tea?
→ "Some" is used in positive sentences and polite offers with uncountable nouns.
6. I have a few ideas about the new project.
→ "A few" is for countable nouns and has a positive meaning.
7. There is much information available on this topic.
→ "Much" is used with uncountable nouns, usually in questions or negatives, but can also be formal in positive statements.
8. We have no money left after the holiday.
→ "No" is used in positive sentences to indicate zero quantity.
9. I need some help with my homework.
→ "Some" is used with uncountable nouns in positive sentences.
10. There is no milk in the fridge—you'll have to buy some.
→ "No" is used to indicate zero quantity in positive sentences.